Karen has extensive experience both as mediator and lawyer in a wide variety of subject matters including oil and gas, contract, injury, construction, employment, real estate, intellectual property, matrimonial, non-profit and charities, the environment, constitutional and aboriginal matters and insurance.

She has conducted more than 500 mediations and facilitated meetings. She has managed and helped to resolve conflict through a full spectrum of dynamics. That spectrum includes two-party facilitated negotiations right through to multi-party consensus-based outcomes. Her success in supporting conflict resolution starts with an ability to connect with and understand a broad range of interests including those at the individual, family, community, corporate, government and societal levels. Her EUB related ADR work has included mediating everything from community conflict related industrial applications and industrial conflict related to such issues as ownership and pipelines.

Karen trains lawyers and other professionals in the practice of mediation and has volunteered her time to assist in the design and set-up of a number of court-connected and community mediation projects.
